Date

2 - 14 December 2018

Location

Katowice, Poland

The annual climate change summit in 2018 takes place in the Polish city of Katowice. The task for negotiators is clear: agree a stringent rulebook for the Paris Agreement to ensure the global climate change treaty can work effectively. The summit, formally the 24th Conference of the Parties to the UNFCCC (COP24), will also see high-level events and provide a forum to discuss relevant developments in climate change policy from around the world. Ecologic Institute will attend the talks with a delegation of 12 colleagues, assisting with legal expertise on actual negotiation matters, but also presenting relevant research results to add to the global dialogue.

Dr. Ralph Bodle and Arne Riedel of Ecologic Legal are participating in the climate summit negotiations by supporting the German delegation within the context of two projects. During the UN climate negotiations, Ralph Bodle deals with legal aspects of climate finance. Arne Riedel is providing legal analysis and advice to the German Federal Ministry for the Environment, Nature Conservation, Building and Nuclear Safety \(BMUB\).

In addition, Ecologic Institute experts will be participating in a range of different side events at the COP.
