

PROJECT

Finance
Trade

Regulatory Cooperation under TTIP - a Risk for Democracy and National Regulation?

[1]

Ecologic Institute with support from the Heinrich Boell Foundation compiled a study to provide factual background to the debate on regulatory cooperation under TTIP. The study contains an overview of existing models for achieving regulatory harmonisation, with a focus on mechanisms already used between the US and EU, in trade agreements with third countries, at the multilateral level with US and EU involvement, and some particularly far-reaching examples of regulatory cooperation. The study also features brief overview of regulatory processes within the US, the EU and Germany in order to clarify which affairs are normally decided in a parliamentary law and which are delegated to other entities like agencies or ministries.

Main Link

Regulatory Cooperation under TTIP - a Risk for Democracy and National Regulation?

Related Articles

- Regulatory Cooperation under TTIP - a Risk for Democracy and National Regulation?
- Discussion on TTIP in the European Parliament
- Study on the EU-US Trade and Investment Partnership \(TTIP\)
- TTIP: Hope or Hype - or a Risk to the Environment?

Further Links

- TTIP Index

Funding

Heinrich Böll Foundation (HBS), Germany

Partner

Ecologic Institute, Germany

Team

Dr. Christiane Gerstetter

Team

Lena Donat, LL.M.

Duration

May 2014 to July 2014

Project ID

221-18

Keywords

TTIP, Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership, regulatory cooperation, harmonisation, democracy, USA, Europe

Source URL (modified on 08/22/2018 - 21:00): <https://www.ecologic.eu/11580>

Links

[1] https://www.ecologic.eu/sites/files/project/2017/fotolia_c_argus_web_0.jpg