

CV

Interns

Alumni

Matthew Collins

Transatlantic Intern

Matthew Collins, a Transatlantic Intern at Ecologic, was working on climate change policy. His additional areas of interest include environmental ethics and justice, agricultural policy, as well as transatlantic environmental relations. At Ecologic, Matthew co-authored a paper on transatlantic environmental relations. The article [1] [pdf, 103 KB, English] is available for download.

A graduate of Macalester College [2] in St. Paul, Minnesota, from which he received a bachelor of arts in German Studies, he has served as an intern for the Austrian Federal Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry, Environment and Water Management [3]. Most recently, he worked with Friends of the Boundary Waters [4], a conservation non-profit based in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Matthew is currently enrolled at the Bard Center for Environmental Policy [5] in New York State (USA), where he will return to earn a master's of science in environmental policy. Before heading back to classes, Matthew will begin a research project on the German renewable energy program courtesy of a research scholarship from the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD [6]).

Source URL (modified on 07/03/2019 - 12:00): <https://www.ecologic.eu/1461>

Links

[1] https://www.ecologic.eu/download/verschiedenes/2005/knigge_collins_an_ocean_apart.pdf

[2] <http://www.macalester.edu/>

[3] <http://www.lebensministerium.at/>

[4] <http://friends-bwca.org/>

[5] <https://www.bard.edu/cep/>

[6] <https://www.daad.de/en/index.html>