Klimaschutzgesetze in Deutschland - In guter Gesellschaft 5TH EPISODE OF "KNOWLEDGE FOR FUTURE - THE ENVIRONMENT PODCAST"

[1]

The German government has stated its intention to implement a climate protection law this year. Half of the German federal states already have such laws, and a good third of the EU's Member States, do too. So what does such a framework climate law actually do? And what has to be included in such a law in order for it to be effective? These are the questions addressed in the fifth episode of the environmental podcast "Knowledge for Future". It draws on the background information of several related publications produced by Ecologic Institute.
