Democracies need a compass, writes Nils Meyer-Ohlendorf in the ipg-journal. To find their way in the haze of polarised debate, the compass must offer four things. First, it must help to understand pluralism – it must help to endure and respect different opinions. Conversely, it must recognise that some positions are outside the democratic spectrum. Thirdly, it must ensure precise language. And fourth, it must identify trends in democracies. The article is available online.

Main Link

Read online: Dr. Jekyll und Mr. Hyde? [German]
Nicht "illiberal", sondern undemokratisch

Language
German

Author(s)
Dr. Nils Meyer-Ohlendorf

Publisher
Friedrich Ebert Foundation (FES), Germany

Year
2019

Published In
ipg-journal

ISSN
2628-7587

Links